

?Cops? Kicked Out of Too Broke...

The reason we have question marks around 'cops' is that we have no specific proof that they were. I'll tell you the story and you can make up your own mind.

It's Friday night at ABATE's Too Broke For Sturgis 19th annual event at Mormon Lake, AZ.

Everybody's party-in' from one end of the place to the other. The place was roaring.

I'm figuring it was around 1-1:30am and things were tapering off. By 2-3am pretty much everybody had crashed except for one karaoke dude. He was blasting about as loud as he could. He had a generator and one trailer with not much of anything in it but a karaoke machine, microphone, table, and chair.

Numerous people told him to shut up. Karaoke dude identified himself as 'Scott' to an event staffer at about 4:30am, when she approached him to turn it down. The more someone would complain, the louder he would get. He was about as defiant and obnoxious as he could be. Yup, I could tell by what I heard back in our campsite that he was trying to pick a fight.... I'm here to tell you he was trying hard. Verbally mother* *ucking and disrespecting everybody he could. As you can see by his picture {top}, the first guy to hit him would probably knock him into next year. Ahhhh..... that's where cooler heads prevailed. Everybody we talked to said, anybody that looks like him and tries to pick a fight at a biker run is either missing one hell of a lot of brain cells OR is a cop with plenty of backup in the wings, trying to shut the run down. So, nobody touched him.

One guy commented this was right out of the ATF handbook. It reminded him of David Koresh, Waco TX, and the technique of using loud one. ABATE people put a lot of effort into making this a successful weekend each year. If Law Enforcement is trying to shut it down with bullshit like this, then they need to be called on it.

Here are photos of central players in this aggression and active participants in the aftermath. Can you ID any of them? At the very least, you can keep them in mind when choosing your next campsite.... And steer clear.

Bruce & Betsy

music for sleep deprivation. He was betting there was at least one Fed close by.

Too Broke is a good, fun run. Nobody's hurting any-

Anyway, this guy shuts down at about 5:30am - just as everyone camped far enough away to get some sleep, was getting up.

We heard that

ID'd not cops picture pulled

Event Security had gone to the campsite, talked to Karaoke Dude, and he had left. WRONG. The next thing we knew someone says there's a bunch of bikers circling his trailer. So, we got there as fast as we could. Now over the years we've seen and heard some pretty out of control partiers but it's not real often that they get thrown out of the campsite. They sober up, do the "I'm sorry man...." thing, and everyone moves on. We shot this video just as a lot of independent bikers and security personnel were kicking him and his support group out.

Cops? Crazy? Ordinary everyday inconsiderate assholes? You be the judge.
